31 MANGA BARCELONA, A UNIQUE AND UNFORGETTABLE EXPERIENCE

A new event packed with guests and special, exclusive events.

December is here, and the air is filled with the scent of manga pages and your favorite ramen. The most eagerly awaited event of the year for lovers of Japanese culture is finally here! We are opening the doors of Fira Barcelona Gran Vía once again to offer four days full of premieres, special guests, and surprises. Following record-breaking editions, Manga Barcelona has become much more than an event; it has established itself as an unforgettable experience that connects art, culture, and the passion of its audience.

We are particularly enthusiastic about this year's celebration thanks to the generosity of Kamome Shirahama. The author of Atelier of Witch Hat has created a poster for Manga Barcelona, it is the second time in the event's history to have a poster illustrated by a mangaka. This milestone further reaffirms the union between Japanese mastery and Catalan essence.

The exceptional talent of this year's guests is unparalleled. In addition to the big names already announced, such as the incomparable Gou Tanabe, more renowned Japanese authors will be present, including Tsutomu Takahashi. He is a versatile and chameleonic artist known for pushing his characters and his readers to their limits. He is visiting us to present his latest titles: Jumbo Max and Guitar Shop Rosie. Akemi Takada, the great anime figure known for designing unforgettable characters such as Lamu, Creamy Mami, and Madoka, will also attend the event this year. Notable among the Japanese guests is Takashi Matsuyama, who will be present at 31 Manga Barcelona. His resourcefulness and creativity led him to become an assistant to the great Akira Toriyama throughout his professional career. He is largely responsible for the backgrounds that appear in the master's works and is a reference point for all those who started out in the art of manga with Dragon Ball.

This year, fans of the legendary series Cowboy Bebop will enjoy an unparalleled lineup of stars that has never been seen anywhere else. Shinichiro Watanabe, the director of Cowboy Bebop, Samurai Champloo, and Lazarus, will be there, along with Yoko Kanno, the SEATBELTS, and Mai Yamane. The latter are responsible for the soundtrack of this cult anime, and although more than 25 years have passed since its premiere, they have never performed outside of Japan. This special occasion will also include meetings with fans and joint interviews discussing the relationship between animation and music.

The Main Stage at Manga Barcelona will also feature rising star AiNA THE END, one of Japan's most prominent artists, known for performing the opening theme for the popular anime Dandadan. The iconic Kumamon, the mascot of Kumamoto Prefecture, will also be there. Kumamon is coming directly from Japan this year to participate in meet-and-greets and activities and to dance on stage with our beloved Onachan.

Once again, the Manga Auditorium will be filled with anime fans, who will be delighted by our program full of surprises and new offerings. One highlight is a tribute to Geki x Cine, a production company that brings spectacular Japanese plays to the big screen. This year, Geki x Cine will be joined by a small exhibition and its screenwriter, Kazuki Nakashima. Nakashima has worked not only in theater but also as the screenwriter of award-winning films at Manga Barcelona, such as Promare, as well as legendary Japanese series such as Kamen Rider. In collaboration with 3Cat, we will have three special screenings coinciding with three premieres on the TV channel. We will reveal the titles soon, but for now, we can announce that on Monday, December 8, at 1:30 p.m., there will be many Pikachus running around the Manga Auditorium. Oriol Estrada, the content advisor, comments: "We are thrilled that 3Cat has chosen Manga Barcelona to showcase some of its new series. We believe it's crucial for public television to support this type of content, and there's no better venue than the event to do so."

31 Manga Barcelona will fill the most iconic venues this year. Nihon Ryori will make your mouth water with its new program. Manga Kids will allow children to enjoy their otaku passion in a specialized space. Nihongo Experience will allow you to deepen and expand your knowledge of Japanese culture. Renowned companies will participate in the form of stands, further reinforcing the fair's international dimension. You can find everything from artisanal Japanese jewelry to the latest figures of your favorite characters.

All the elements that comprise the Manga Barcelona experience have contributed to its consolidation as an unquestionable reference point in the dissemination of Japanese culture. Meritxell Puig, the director of Manga Barcelona, points out that “with each passing edition, this gathering of manga and anime enthusiasts writes a new chapter in history, becoming a unique and irreplaceable experience that the public does not want to miss.”

The soundtrack of Manga Barcelona will be louder than ever from December 5 to 8, 2025, at Fira de Barcelona Gran Vía.

SHINICHIRO WATANABE

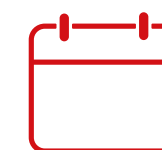

Shinichiro Watanabe is one of the most influential figures in global anime—and for good reason. He’s the original creator and director of iconic titles like Cowboy Bebop (1998), the space western that became a cult classic and was adapted into a live-action series by Netflix in 2021.

The adventures of Spike and his crew marked the beginning of Watanabe’s remarkable career, which would later bring us Samurai Champloo (2004), Kids on the Slope (2012), Terror in Resonance (2014), Space Dandy (2014), and Carole & Tuesday (2019)—series in which the Japanese director blends drama, science fiction, and comedy, always with music at the heart of the story. His collaborations with artists like Yoko Kanno and the late Nujabes are central to his unique audiovisual storytelling.

In 2025, Watanabe returns with Lazarus, a sci-fi series set in the year 2052, produced by MAPPA for Adult Swim and streaming on HBO Max.

YOKO KANNO

Yoko Kanno is not just a composer—she’s a sonic storyteller, a genre-bending magician, and one of the most influential figures in anime music history. Best known as the mind behind the iconic sounds of Cowboy Bebop and Ghost in the Shell, she’s spent decades creating unforgettable scores that range from jazz and classical to electronica, blues, ambient, and experimental rock. You never know where a Yoko Kanno soundtrack will take you—but it’s always somewhere extraordinary. And of course, she leads the enigmatic band SEATBELTS, responsible for bringing Cowboy Bebop’s unforgettable soundtrack to life.

Her anime legacy is legendary. She first caught attention with the lush, cinematic score of Macross Plus, followed by the dreamy, emotional soundscape of The Vision of Escaflowne. Then came Cowboy Bebop—a genre-defying explosion of jazz, funk, and cool that forever changed how music was used in anime. That was just the beginning.

AiNA THE END

With a voice like no other, AiNA THE END has become one of Japan's most exciting artists—and if you need proof, just listen to On The Way, the opening theme for Season 2 of DAN DA DAN. Since the end of BiSH, the legendary idol group she was part of from 2015 to 2023, her solo career has taken off, especially in the anime world. Her songs have featured in major hits like Gundam: The Witch from Mercury (Red:birthmark), The Apothecary Diaries (The Spell), and Mononoke: Phantom in the Rain (Love Sick), whose music video won big at the MTV Video Music Awards Japan.

But AiNA THE END isn't just a voice. She writes her own music, takes bold creative risks, and acts too—she starred in Kyrie (2023), a film by acclaimed director Shunji Iwai, and has collaborated with artists like Kenshi Yonezu or Mondo Grosso. With three solo albums since her 2021 debut and a string of sold-out shows—including a headline performance at the Budokan, now streaming on Prime Video—AiNA's only getting started. Konata's passion for art has been evident since childhood, and her artistic talents have been apparent from a very young age. She studied for an intermediate degree in graphic design and was a finalist in several competitions, but she found that design did not fulfil her. Her passion for comics, and more specifically manga, had been with her since childhood, so she began studying manga at Escola Joso at the weekends.

She soon realized that this was the path she wanted to follow, so she enrolled on the Graphic Art course. During her time there, she won first prize in the international Clip Studio Paint comic and manga competition with her work, ¡Ánimo papá! (Come on, Dad!). She currently works for the Planeta publishing house on the bimonthly magazine Planeta Manga and the European magazine Manga Issho. She is the author of Kohva and the illustrator of Nebesta.

GOU TANABE: Lovecraft in the form of Manga

H. P. Lovecraft is widely regarded as one of the founding fathers of modern horror. His monsters and his vision of human insignificance in the face of infinity have inspired generations of writers and artists. Gou Tanabe embraces this legacy, translating it into the language of manga with extraordinary visual power.

This exhibition shows how drawing can give shape to what Lovecraft created with words. Through the sections Cthulhu and Other Monsters, Ruins of Other Worlds, Landscapes of Desolation and Terror, Transmutation, and Descent into Madness, we will explore Tanabe's interpretation of the Lovecraftian cosmos.

MANGAGÊMU:

Japanese anime, manga, and video games

Video games arrived in Japan more than fifty years ago and quickly became part of its popular culture. They coexisted with other local entertainment industries, such as toys, manga, and anime. Video games learned from and blended with these industries, absorbing their visual sensibility. Within a few years, Japanese gēmu (video games) had become a global creative force, exporting the country's visual culture.

This exhibition offers a journey into the imaginary world of gēmu, focusing on their dialogue and exchange with manga, where authors, franchises, characters, genres, and even places intersect. We invite you to discover, recognize, or rediscover a pixelated world that has become a universal language. Gēmu on!

SANT JORDI. FROM AUCA TO ÔTSU-E

This unique exhibition is the result of a collaboration between Escola Joso in Barcelona and Seian University of Art and Design in Japan. This experience has been an opportunity for students from two very different cultures to work on an artistic tradition that is distinct yet, at its core, very similar.

A professor from each institution taught a class to the students of the other school, each explaining a historical precedent of comics: the auca, a traditional Catalan form that uses illustrations to narrate stories in sequence, and the Ôtsu-e, a popular Japanese style of images and texts that reflect everyday life and traditional legends.

SEASONS OF THE YEAR IN JAPAN

MANGA KIDS ACADEMY EXPO

The Manga Kids Academy is back this year with more creative activities for children. It is expanding its exhibition and outreach space with a new theme: the seasons in Japan. The Japanese have a unique relationship with nature and weather phenomena, including rain, blossoms, and typhoons. What do people eat during each season? How do they dress? What holidays do they celebrate? How do they celebrate them? Discover the basics of the Japanese way of life and how it influences its people.

As always, this is an expo for the whole family. There are visual and interactive elements for children, as well as additional information for adults via QR codes.

ITADAKIMANGA WAGASHI

Japanese cuisine is an art form, and wagashi confectionery is its ultimate expression: awaken the five senses! Wagashi also plays a fundamental role in the tradition of gift-giving. Its packaging is so creative and elegant that it resembles small works of art that change with the seasons.

Wagashi does not contain powdered green tea. Curious, isn't it? Though it may seem unusual, wagashi has always been the perfect accompaniment to ceremonial tea, enhancing its flavor without stealing the show. Matcha is popular in Western pastries and some modern Japanese desserts, but classic wagashi remains true to its style: simple, elegant, and delicious. Discover the expansion of the Itadakimanga exhibition, where wagashi, Japanese sweets full of flavor and tradition, take center stage.

JAPAN INTERNATIONAL MANGA AWARDS

This exhibition gathers the works of Spanish authors who have been awarded in the history of the Japan International Manga Awards. With names like Ana C. Sánchez, Ana Oncina or Emma Ríos.

COSPLAYS (made by magic)

The 31 Manga Barcelona will feature an exhibition of handmade cosplays inspired by Atelier of Witch Hat, the incredible work by Kamome Shirahama and creator of this edition's official poster.

This year, we will also showcase cosplays of the main characters and, for the first time, we'll have international participation!

COSPLAY SHOOT

Cosplay Shoot, an exhibition that is also a contest, where cosplayers and photographers join forces to showcase their talent through snapshots that capture the essence of cosplay.

The selected images will be part of the on-site exhibition at the event, within the Cosplay Zone.

LAZARUS

Retrospective with Shinichiro Watanabe: Screening of Lazarus

Shinichiro Watanabe is one of the greatest icons of anime worldwide—and for good reason: he is the original creator and director of masterpieces such as Cowboy Bebop (1998), the space western that became a cult classic and was adapted into live action by Netflix in 2021.

In 2025, Watanabe returns with Lazarus, a sci-fi series set in the year 2052, created by MAPPA for Adult Swim and available on HBO Max, from which we will screen Episode 1.

Featuring action scenes choreographed by Chad Stahelski (John Wick) and an outstanding soundtrack by Kamasi Washington, Bonobo, and Floating Points, Lazarus brings together all the director's passions.
